The policeman ran a ladder up to the second floor, from where, as fast as the women and children reached him on the fire escape, he carried them to the ground. Among them was Mrs. Maggie Murtha, a heavy woman, and she was hysterical with fright. She had a three-year-old child in her arms, and no scoper had she settled in the arms of the policeman than she fainted away. The policeman managed to get down with his heavy burden, and then went up the ladder to rescue more.

In all Kenny assisted in the rescue of sevon persons-Mrs. Murtha, James Murtha, Kate Murtha, Mrs. Mary Schaffer, Cora Schaffer, Edward Schaffer and John Maher. Except the two women, all were After Running a Pretty Roce at Brookline childern under fifteen years of age.

Edward Devine, a gas bill collector, who was passing, saw the flames coming out of a rear window and turned in an alarm. Then he and Policeman James Murray rang all the bells to alarm the occupants, and most of them ran downstairs and escaped without difficulty. Devine remembered the old couple, and, calling to the policeman dragged them out. It was the first thing the aged couple knew of the fire. But for Devine remembering them they would probably have burned to death, as the fire was a bad one. The occupants left all the loors open, and the wind fanned the flames

Mayor Strong said that to him the whole plan seemed to be to turn over 281 acres of the Bronx Park to a private corporation, a hing which he thought should never be done. He pointed out that the restilents in the immediate neighborhood had protested against the place being used for the location of the gardens, and then he added:

"If we want a great zoological garden let us get one of our own. We already have the nucleus of one, and that would make a good start."

JOLLITY IN JAIL NEW YEAR'S EVE.

Sheriff Addresses the Prisoners and Prisoners Tell Their Stories at Tamsen's Trial Before the Governor's Commissioner.

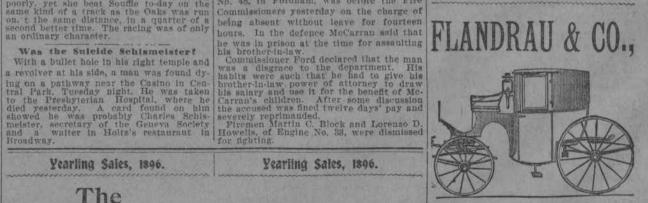

Some interesting stories about Ludlow Street Jail were told at the trial of Sheriff Tamsen before the Governor's Commissioner, William H. Robertson, yesterday. The hearing was held in the old Criminal Court building, in City Hall Park. The Sheriff was represented by General Tracy, who had brushed up his German for the occasion, and on the other side Assistant Attorney-General Hasbrouck appeared for Isidore Isaacs, who quarrelled with his tailor about a $7 bill and remained in jail from December 5, 1895, to March 4, 1896, told of the liquid "smiles" he had in the jail. The first difficulty he had there was on December 30. He had looked at a new rule, posted on the bulletin board, and he thought it so funny he laughed, whereupon Keeper Buchanan jabbed Isaacs with an official knee and called him hard names. "What was the rule?" was asked.

"It provided that if a civil prisoner was very ill he must stay in his cell and be fed on bread and water till a doctor came." Even Tamsen laughed at this, for which he was reproved by dignified Mr. Has-brouck, who said he could see nothing funly in prisoners being roughly used by a keeper. Then the Sheriff subsided, and whispered in German to General Tracy. The witness claimed he had told the Sheriff of the assault.

"What did the Sheriff say?" "He said he could not get gentlemen to
